U.S. FEDERATION OF WORKER COOPERATIVES

The United States Federation of Worker Cooperatives (USFWC) is the national grassroots membership organization for worker co-ops.

Its membership also includes democratic workplaces, developers, and organizations and individuals that support worker co-ops. The USFWC advances worker-owned, -managed, and -governed workplaces through co-op education, advocacy and business development.

As a membership and advocacy organization, the USFWC connects worker co-op members to benefits, to each other and to the larger co-op and economic justice movements. It amplifies its members' voices to advocate for worker ownership and the worker co-op business model at local, state, and national levels.

Federation members, ranging from 2 to 2,000 workers, can be found across the country, spanning dozens of industries, with varying management and governance structures. With about 160 business and organizational members representing close to 4,000 workers across the country, the USFWC is building a dynamic movement for democratic worker ownership. The USFWC is led by a 100% member-elected Board of Directors and a small but mighty staff.

BECOME A MEMBER - JOIN THE USFWC NOW

As a grassroots member-led movement, our membership is our power and our strength.

We welcome membership from:

- worker cooperatives
- democratic workplaces
- co-op developers
- startup cooperatives
- geographic and sector-based federations
- allied organizations
- individuals

Benefits include:

- high-quality referrals
- member and peer advisory councils
- national advocacy
- access to services like dental and vision benefits, education, and training

DEMOCRACY AT WORK INSTITUTE

The only national organization dedicated solely to worker co-op development, the Democracy at Work Institute advances the field in order to create a fairer economy and better jobs.

The Institute was created by the US Federation of Worker Co-ops (USFWC) to expand worker ownership in a movement that is adequately supported, effective, and strategically directed. Its work ensures that the community's growth is rooted in worker co-ops while also reaching new communities most directly affected by inequality.

As a think-and-do-tank, the Institute brings on-the-ground experience with co-op business to a birds-eye view of the national stage. Through research, education and relationship-building, DAWI works to scale the worker co-op movement to effect transformative change for individuals and communities throughout the country.

With a library of resources and on-the-ground-knowledge of worker co-op enterprises, DAWI works to help:

- worker co-ops to develop, grow and replicate
- co-op developers to define their model and work toward scale
- non-profit organizations to support the implementation of new co-op programs, and to increase the impacts of existing programs
- conventional businesses to support in succession planning and transition to co-op ownership
- governments and economic developers to design and implement policies and programs that use worker co-ops as a tool for local economic development

ABOUT WORKER CO-OPS

A worker co-op is a values-driven business that puts worker and community benefit at the core of its purpose, with two central characteristics:

- Workers own the business and participate in its financial success on the basis of their labor contribution to the co-op.
- Workers control the governance of the co-op; they have representation on and vote for the board of directors, adhering to the principle of one vote per worker-owner.

In addition to their economic and governance participation, worker-owners often manage the day-to-day operations through various democratic management structures.

WORKER CO-OPS IN THE UNITED STATES

- Researchers and practitioners estimate ~500 democratic workplaces in the U.S., employing around 8,000 people and generating over $400 million in annual revenues.
- Any business can be a worker-owned and -controlled; in the U.S., worker co-ops tend to be concentrated in the service and retail sectors, including transportation and food-service, health care, manufacturing and engineering, technology, and design.
- Worker co-ops are currently experiencing a surge in popularity, marked by industry and sector concentrations and the growth of a support infrastructure at the local, regional and national levels.

HISTORY OF U.S. WORKER CO-OPS

Most of today's largest worker co-ops were founded during the 1970s and 1980s, as part of an explosion in alternative economic forms.

The co-ops that survived have thrived, and have helped seed new growth through investment of capital and expertise in a second wave of worker co-op development starting in the late 1990s.

THE BENEFITS OF WORKER CO-OPS

Worker co-ops have proven to be an effective tool for creating and maintaining sustainable, dignified jobs; generating wealth; improving the quality of life of workers; and promoting community and local economic development, particularly for people who lack access to business ownership or even sustainable work options.

“One of the main barriers to business ownership for people of color is access to start-up capital... [Worker co-ops make] business ownership more accessible.”
 - UNITED FOR A FAIR ECONOMY, State of the Dream 2013

- Worker co-ops build local wealth. Profits do not go to distant investors, but instead go directly to the workers. With ownership in the hands of workers, who are usually living and spending locally, these companies stay connected and accountable, building community wealth.
- Worker co-ops create quality jobs. Workers have a meaningful role in the business, as they contribute to and benefit from the success of a company they co-own. Jobs at worker co-ops tend to be longer-term, offer extensive skills training, and provide better wages than similar jobs in conventional companies, offering opportunities for greater participation in management and governance decisions.
- Worker co-ops create meaningful change for underserved populations. As stated in the New York Times, “by placing workers’ needs ahead of profits, they address the root cause of economic disparity.” (3/23/14). More than half of worker co-ops in the U.S. today were designed to improve low-wage jobs and build wealth in communities most directly affected by inequality, helping vulnerable workers build skills and earning potential, household income and assets.

By the mid-2000s, several worker co-op development organizations had begun to have success using the form as a means to create good jobs for low- and moderate-income workforces.

Regional efforts for municipal funding and support emerge, demonstrating widespread support for worker co-ops

DIRECTORY

This directory includes a best faith effort at a comprehensive listing of the businesses and organizations across the United States where paid workers are actively participating in worker ownership, governance, and management.

This includes worker cooperatives, as well as multi-stakeholder and consumer cooperatives, non-profit organizations, and democratic ESOPs where workers, who may not have full legal ownership, actively practice workplace democracy.

COOPERATIVE DEVELOPERS, TRAINING ACADEMIES & BUSINESS INCUBATORS

This section covers three types of cooperative developers:

- Technical Assistance Provider: Provides technical assistance resources to worker cooperatives and the general public.
- Incubator: Incubates worker cooperatives as part of their own programming. (Generally not open to the public for technical assistance to worker cooperatives unless otherwise noted.)
- Academy: Runs a training program for people interested in starting worker cooperatives.

ABOUT THE DEMOCRACY AT WORK NETWORK

A PROFESSIONAL PEER NETWORK FOR DEMOCRATIC BUSINESSES

The Democracy at Work Network (DAWN), a project of the U.S. Federation of Worker Co-ops, is a network of certified peer advisors providing technical assistance services to worker co-ops from other worker co-op members.

Its goals are to:

- Meet the demand for technical assistance and development advice with high-quality services
- Increase worker-to-worker co-op technical assistance capacity from inside the movement

Worker co-ops, like all small businesses, require professional services to support the creation and functioning of their business. Due to the specialized nature of worker ownership, they also require specialized assistance in setting up financial, governance, operations, and decision-making structures, as well as training in democratic management. DAWN exists to meet these needs.

DAWN peer advisors and staff offer:

- General business support
- Assistance to a worker cooperative around a specific project or problem
- Responding to an emergency within your cooperative
- General education about worker cooperatives
- Startup cooperatives
- Preliminary help writing bylaws
- Help in applying for a loan or other financing
- Set-up of democratic structures for governance or management
- Ongoing training
- Training in democratic communications tools: facilitation, mediation, and conflict resolution
- Development of accountability systems and worker evaluations
- Training in cooperative finances

Learn more about DAWN and find out how to become a Peer Advisor:

SPECIAL THANKS

to everyone who contributed to this project and the many supporters of the U.S. Federation of Worker Cooperatives and the Democracy at Work Institute, including:

The USFWC membership; our co-op printer Radix Media and our funders. This essential community resource wouldn't be possible without all of you.

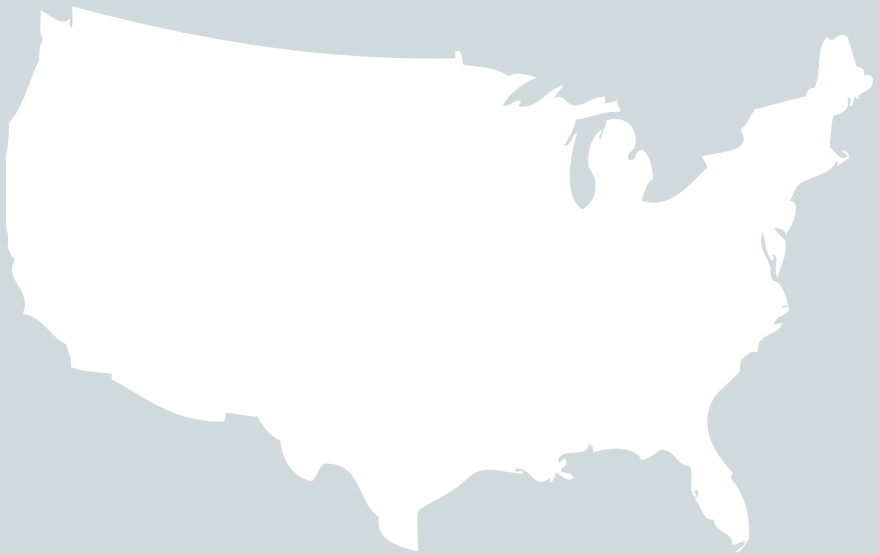

Thank you!
